WHY LONDON?

LONDON is a great place to do business. For centuries it has been a major global trading hub. We take pride in Napoleon's famous insult of the British as a nation of "shopkeepers." Not only does London engage in trade with its historical Commonwealth partners it also has strong trade with both the Far and Middle East. But almost above all Britain is known for its "special relationship" with the US, and London is often hailed as the 'first step' for European businesses into the American market.

LONDON, geographically, is in the centre of the world. The renowned meridian line in Greenwich allows one to look both East and West. Visitors and businesses are welcomed.

LONDON has a longstanding tradition of supporting business, and the 'City' continues to be a global powerhouse.

INTERNATIONAL CITY

London, as an international city, embraces its role as a commercial and cultural melting pot. One can experience a global culinary journey, reflecting the diverse cultures that thrive within its borders. In addition to its renowned dining scene, London boasts a dynamic cultural landscape with a rich theater tradition, numerous galleries, museums, and a proliferation of cinemas throughout the city.

Chelsea, a prominent area within London, not only hosts high-end shopping and art galleries but also serves as a prime residential area for high-net-worth individuals, making it a sought-after location within the city.

The Treasure House Fair is a celebration of diversity and eclecticism, offering a convivial space for both local and international collectors and enthusiasts to engage with a wide array of artistic and cultural treasures. Our inclusive and cosmopolitan environment fosters a deep respect for all forms of art and provides a platform for their celebration and trade.
